I support any renewable energy project as a general rule and this is no exception. The vertical turbans would seem to be better than the older propeller ones for a number of reasons. More can be installed in the same area than the propeller type and wildlife interference would be kept at a minimum for starters. I would install one on my property if it were allowed in Lincoln but, such are the ordinances against that.

I have also looked into Solar panels but, at this time, they are not cost efficient at this time. Maybe down the road.
